

COLTS FOUGHT THE REGULARS A DRAW.

Strong, Fast Play by the New York Youngsters Tied the Game.

Twice the Tally Was Evened Up Through Spurts by the Old Stagers.

BASES ON BALLS WERE PLENTY.

Seymour and Bowen Were Too Anxious to Prevent the Batsmen from Finding Their Curves on Jacksonville's Diamond.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 10.—George Davis brought luck to the regular team today. He arrived by steamer in the morning, donned a baseball harness in the afternoon, and, with a squad of steamer friends rooting in the grand stand, helped his associates tie the two knots in the score. Davis was first billed to umpire, but the cast was changed at the last moment, the new arrival being sent to left field, while Dad Clarke passed judgment on balls and strikes.

The game opened with Seymour in the box for the regulars. Tall Mr. Bowen, of Indiana, performed a like service for the Colts. Both developed a latent bases-on-balls streak in an earnest endeavor to keep the ball away from the bats of the opposition. Seymour worked through six innings and then gave way to Kagey, who gave the second team six hits, four of which occurred in one round.

Mr. Kagey was ably supported by Oscar Foster, of Virginia. Zeorfas would have relieved Oscar, but his face is so badly swollen from the thump he received yesterday that his mask no longer fits him. Stanhope caught a perfect game. Foster is also improving.

The score was twice tied, and the game ended even. In the fifth, with the Colts five tallies to the good, the Regulars made a spurt that evened things up a bit. They fell upon Mr. Bowen and smothered him for six hits, scoring five runs. Even G. Davis, who still had his sea legs on, added one double to the collection, thus convincing his sea friends that he could do something else besides fan holes in the air. He had struck out twice.

In the next inning Harry Davis knocked the stoppers off the tie with a double, scoring on a single by Mulligan. The inning ended with a double play, Pfeiffer making an out on Mulligan at the bag and heading Batiam off at first base. The next two tallies were rounded up in the seventh, placing the Colts four ahead. The eighth and last was productive of nothing but ephers, and then came the final and sensational round of the game.

With a lead of four runs to overcome, Van Halten landed on the first ball Herman plucked for two bases. A sacrifice by George Davis sent him to third. Tiersman helped Van home with a single, Connaughton hit for two bases, scoring Tiersman, and Pfeiffer's single brought in Connaughton.

At this stage, the game concluded that a base on balls would do Bill Clark a world of good. Bill trotted down the line, and the next man up, Foster, smashed the ball for two bases. Pfeiffer sprinted in with the run that tied the score, while Clark galloped on to third base.

Kagey was next on the list, but Farrell went in to win the game for the Regulars. The Duke sent a long fly to centre, but Little Mulligan got under the ball and passed it in to Stanhope, completing a double play and snatching victory from the banner of the Giants. The Colts played a strong, fast game. The score:
